Mohrenstraße 60, Berlin-Mitte, Room 105

The election panel discusses the alterations likely to follow the recent change of government in Britain. Starting out from the question what has caused the swing of political mood in the country, the debate focuses on a number of issues which might become controversial in the near future: what will happen to Britain's electoral system? Who is going to pay for the country's financial crisis? Can the new government restore trust in politicians after the expenses scandal? How can we expect the first coalition government in 65 years to act on issues of global importance in the second decade of the 21st century?

The panelists are Barbara Klimke, Britain correspondent of the Berliner Zeitung, Hamish Mathieson, senior lecturer in industrial relations at Manchester Metropolitan University, and Sebastian Berg, visiting professor at the Centre for British Studies.

The lecture will be held in English.
All are welcome. Admission free.
