

GROSSBRITANNIEN-ZENTRUM Centre for British Studies

Anthony J. Nicholls

University of Oxford

'Apparently we simply get up early and lay them on the beach — the Germans say they're wonderful for claiming territory'

Ups and downs in Anglo-German relations, 1949-2008

Thursday, 28 May 2009, 18.15

Großbritannien-Zentrum / Centre for British Studies
Mohrenstraße 60, Berlin-Mitte, Room 105

Nicholls attempts to discover the reasons for the apparently disappointing relationship between the two countries, but also addresses the numerous areas of activity – for example, diplomacy, military cooperation, higher education and scientific research – in which friendly collaboration is the rule rather than the exception. He will try to assess what part resentments on both sides after the Second World War played in conditioning the atmosphere between the two countries, and to what extent the commercial media have caused frictions on both sides.

Anthony J. Nicholls is a retired Professor of Modern German History at the University of Oxford and an Emeritus Fellow of St. Antony's College, Oxford. His research interests are in Anglo-German relations since 1945 and contemporary German history. He has been active in encouraging Anglo-German academic exchanges, and in 1993 was awarded the Bundesverdienstkreuz for services to Anglo-German academic cooperation.

In cooperation with:

The lecture will be held in English. All are welcome. Admission free.

contact and registration: gbz@gbz.hu-berlin.de and Fax: (0 30) 20 93 53 28

GROSSBRITANNIEN-ZENTRUM Centre for British Studies

'Apparently we simply get up early and lay them on the beach — the Germans say they're wonderful for claimina territory'

Anthony J. Nicholls (University of Oxford): Ups and downs in Anglo-German relations, 1949-2008

Thursday, 28 May 2009, 18.15

Großbritannien-Zentrum / Centre for British Studies
Mohrenstraße 60, Berlin-Mitte, Room 105

Nicholls attempts to discover the reasons for the apparently disappointing relationship between the two countries, but also addresses the numerous areas of activity – for example, diplomacy, military cooperation, higher education and scientific research – in which friendly collaboration is the rule rather than the exception. He will try to assess to what extent the resentments after the Second World War and the commercial media have caused frictions on both sides.

Anthony J. Nicholls is a retired Professor of Modern German History at the University of Oxford and an Emeritus Fellow of St. Antony's College, Oxford. His research interests are in Anglo-German relations since 1945 and contemporary German history. He has been active in encouraging Anglo-German academic exchanges, and in 1993 was awarded the Bundesverdienstkreuz for services to Anglo-German academic cooperation.

In cooperation with:

The lecture will be held in English. All are welcome. Admission free.

contact and registration: gbz@gbz.hu-berlin.de and Fax: (0 30) 20 93 99042